SEALEGS FILES HIGH COURT INJUNCTION AGAINST ORION AND SMUGGLER MARINE

Sealegs Corporations wholly owned subsidiary Sealegs International has today filed an application for a High Court injunction in relation to alleged infringement of its intellectual property by Orion Marine, Smuggler Marine and some ex-Sealegs employees who are employed by Orion Marine.

Sealegs CEO David McKee Wright said “We have filed our application for an injunction in the High Court against these parties in order to protect our valuable intellectual property rights. We believe our intellectual property has been recklessly infringed upon and we believe the court will agree”.

He went on to say “We will vigorously defend any and all attempts of what we believe to be an infringement of our intellectual property. Sealegs has invested millions of dollars and years of development in its unique amphibious technology, and it is a very valuable commercial asset to both our company and our shareholders”.
